amanfromMars 1 Thu 31 Mar 19:25 [1603311925] telling IT like IT is on http://forums.theregister.co.uk/forum/1/2016/03/31/britain_nuclear_missiles_software_upgrade_cyberwar_fears_trident_ii_vanguard/

The View from Away Out There

The launch of the missiles is entirely dependent upon the submarines rather than the missiles, and despite jibes about Windows for Warships – all Royal Navy vessels currently run a hardened, customised version of Windows XP – it is very unlikely any non-state actor would have the capability to infect the submarines' systems.

I disagree, and would suggest and caution that future action compromising and overriding security of any installed and upgraded precautions and failsafeguards, is ever more likely to exacerbate an escalating problem with practically zero prior warning of there being a catastrophic problem/systemic vulnerability zeroday exploited.

And the crux of the matter is that the launch of missiles is entirely dependent upon submariners, and they are always vulnerable to the stealthy mind-bending/brainwashing capabilities of both smarter state and super experienced non-state actors.

Guarding against cyber attacks is akin to attacking ghosts and phantoms the problem for solutions lies deep within and not outside of siloed systems. Although it could be admitted in the particular and peculiar nuclear weaponry case, that explosive munitions instructions for systems failures and destructions are provided on the outside and supplied via the darker web sides of cyberspace, which one has to accept is a virtual place and practically untouchable and intangible, and that can make it certainly almighty in the right hands, hearts and minds, and in the wrong hands, hearts and minds, one hell of a profitable loss making playground.

That's just the way IT is these days. PEBKAC Rules ? . And Words Create, Command and Control and Collapse Worlds

Ken Cheney, Chef's vice president of business development, told us flatly: "Contrary to reports, automation will not lead to the Earth's destruction."

Software automation providing virtual machine autonomisation with critical event self-actualisations/virtual reality presentations via vitally interconnected internetworking media hosting platforms may not lead to the Earth's destruction, but the choice and paths for it and IT to do so, are forever always available, Chef/Adrian Bridgwater. However, one could consider what it and IT have led to, is Earth's takeover and makeover by Seriously SMARTR Systems in Live Operational Virtual Environments with Global Operating Devices.

The kings of Spain brought us the conquistadores and masters, whose footprints remained in the circular land grants assigned to those searching for gold in the sands of rivers, an abusive and shameful form of exploitation, traces of which can be noted from the air in many places around the country.

Tourism today, in large part, consists of viewing the delights of our landscapes and tasting exquisite delicacies from our seas, and is always shared with the private capital of large foreign corporations, whose earnings, if they don't reach billions of dollars, are not worthy of any attention whatsoever.

Since I find myself obliged to mention the issue, I must add – principally for the youth – that few people are aware of the importance of such a condition, in this singular moment of human history. I would not say that time has been lost, but I do not hesitate to affirm that we are not adequately informed, not you, nor us, of the knowledge and conscience that we must have to confront the realities which challenge us. The first to be taken into consideration is that our lives are but a fraction of a historical second, which must also be devoted in part to the vital necessities of every human being. One of the characteristics of this condition is the tendency to overvalue its role, in contrast, on the other hand, with the extraordinary number of persons who embody the loftiest dreams.

Nevertheless, no one is good or bad entirely on their own. None of us is designed for the role we must assume in a revolutionary society, although Cubans had the privilege of José Martí's example. I even ask myself if he needed to die or not in Dos Ríos, when he said, "For me, it's time," and charged the Spanish forces entrenched in a solid line of firepower. He did not want to return to the United States, and there was no one who could make him. Someone ripped some pages from his diary. Who bears this treacherous responsibility, undoubtedly the work of an unscrupulous conspirator? Differences between the leaders were well known, but never indiscipline. "Whoever attempts to appropriate Cuba will reap only the dust of its soil drenched in blood, if he does not perish in the struggle," stated the glorious Black leader Antonio Maceo. Máximo Gómez is likewise recognized as the most disciplined and discreet military chief in our history.

Looking at it from another angle, how can we not admire the indignation of Bonifacio Byrne when, from a distant boat returning him to Cuba, he saw another flag alongside that of the single star and declared, "My flag is that which has never been mercenary..." immediately adding one of the most beautiful phrases I have ever heard, "If it is torn to shreds, it will be my flag one day our dead raising their arms will still be able to defend it!" Nor will I forget the blistering words of Camilo Cienfuegos that night, when, just some tens of meters away, bazookas and machine guns of U.S. origin in the hands of counterrevolutionaries were pointed toward that terrace on which we stood.

Obama was born in August of 1961, as he himself explained. More than half a century has transpired since that time.

Let us see, however, how our illustrious guest thinks today:

"I have come here to bury the last remnant of the Cold War in the Americas. I have come here to extend the hand of friendship to the Cuban people," followed by a deluge of concepts entirely novel for the majority of us:

"We both live in a new world, colonized by Europeans," the U.S. President continued, "Cuba, like the United States, was built in part by slaves brought here from Africa. Like the United States, the Cuban people can trace their heritage to both slaves and slave-owners."

The native populations don't exist at all in Obama's mind. Nor does he say that the Revolution swept away racial discrimination, or that pensions and salaries for all Cubans were decreed by it before Mr. Barrack Obama was 10 years old. The hateful, racist bourgeois custom of hiring strongmen to expel Black citizens from recreational centers was swept away by the Cuban Revolution – that which would go down in history for the battle against apartheid that liberated Angola, putting an end to the presence of nuclear weapons on a continent of more than a billion inhabitants. This was not the objective of our solidarity, but rather to help the peoples of Angola, Mozambique, Guinea Bissau and others under the fascist colonial domination of Portugal.

In 1961, just one year and three months after the triumph of the Revolution, a mercenary force with armored artillery and infantry, backed by aircraft, trained and accompanied by U.S. warships and aircraft carriers, attacked our country by surprise. Nothing can justify that perfidious attack which cost our country hundreds of losses, including deaths and injuries

As for the pro-yankee assault brigade, no evidence exists anywhere that it was possible to evacuate a single mercenary. Yankee combat planes were presented before the United Nations as the equipment of a Cuban uprising.

The military experience and power of this country is very well known. In Africa, they likewise believed that revolutionary Cuba would be easily taken out of the fight. The invasion via southern Angola by racist South African motorized brigades got close to Luanda, the capital in the eastern part of the country. There a struggle began which went on for no less than 15 years. I wouldn't even talk about this, if I didn't have the elemental duty to respond to Obama's speech in Havana's Alicia Alonso Grand Theater.

Nor will I attempt to give details, only emphasize that an honorable chapter in the struggle for human liberation was written there. In a certain way, I hoped Obama's behavior would be correct. His humble origin and natural intelligence were evident. Mandela was imprisoned for life and had become a giant in the struggle for human dignity. One day, a copy of a book narrating part of Mandela's life reached my hands, and – surprise! – the prologue was by Barack Obama. I rapidly skimmed the pages. The minuscule size of Mandela's handwriting noting facts was incredible. Knowing men such as him was worthwhile.

Regarding the episode in South Africa I must point out another experience. I was really interested in learning more about how the South Africans had acquired nuclear weapons. I only had very precise information that there were no more than 10 or 12 bombs. A reliable source was the professor and researcher Piero Gleijeses, who had written the text Conflicting Missions: Havana, Washington, and Africa, 1959-1976, an excellent piece. I knew he was the most reliable source on what had happened and I told him so; he responded that he had not spoken more about the matter as in the text he had responded to questions from compañero Jorge Risquet, who had been Cuban ambassador and collaborator in Angola, a very good friend of his. I located Risquet; already undertaking other important tasks he was finishing a course which would last several weeks longer. That task coincided with a fairly recent visit by Piero to our country; I had warned him that Risquet was getting on and his health was not great. A few days later what I had feared occurred. Risquet deteriorated and died. When Piero arrived there was nothing to do except make promises, but I had already received information related to the weapons and the assistance that racist South Africa had received from Reagan and Israel.

I do not know what Obama would have to say about this story now. I am unaware as to what he did or did not know, although it is very unlikely that he knew absolutely nothing. My modest suggestion is that he gives it thought and does not attempt now to elaborate theories on Cuban policy.

There is an important issue:

Obama made a speech in which he uses the most sweetened words to express: "It is time, now, to forget the past, leave the past behind, let us look to the future together, a future of hope. And it won't be easy, there will be challenges and we must give it time; but my stay here gives me more hope in what we can do together as friends, as family, as neighbors, together."

I suppose all of us were at risk of a heart attack upon hearing these words from the President of the United States. After a ruthless blockade that has lasted almost 60 years, and what about those who have died in the mercenary attacks on Cuban ships and ports, an airliner full of passengers blown up in midair, mercenary invasions, multiple acts of violence and coercion?

Nobody should be under the illusion that the people of this dignified and selfless country will renounce the glory, the rights, or the spiritual wealth they have gained with the development of education, science and culture.

I also warn that we are capable of producing the food and material riches we need with the efforts and intelligence of our people. We do not need the empire to give us anything. Our efforts will be legal and peaceful, as this is our commitment to peace and fraternity among all human beings who live on this planet.

It is naive and pig-headed and not at all smart, to not imagine individuals terrorised and portrayed as barbaric savages learning quickly of that which is really responsible for their predicament, and their taking all possible smarter action to exact an appropriate response and more highly targeted retribution against the quartermasters of their woes.

The destruction of innocents always creates guilty parties to be ruthlessly dealt with in all ways possible to imagine by systems under attack.

Is the F-35 multirole fighter a Ponzi and latter day Spruce Goose type flighty operation?

Re: Ditch it already @Gray the Explosive Clock is Ticking

Quite so, Gray, and that is why US debt is fast approaching $20 trillion [$20million million/$20,000,000,000,000] and will forever be rising and never paid off. And can you imagine the compounding interest being paid/charged to that loan, increasing the debt even further.

But who virtually owns all the debt and physically provides the cash for spending in the insolvency and are they both the same or something completely different to wonder about. What beings keep Uncle Sam afloat and are they worldly wise and foolish to provide the means of nations' destruction and populations' oppression.

It is cold comfort indeed, to realise that many administrations are equally trapped to pay to hidden from sight and mind forces, crippling astronomical ransoms which deliver rebellion and revolution National Debt Clocks

It and IT is an AI and NeuReal Great Gameplay and you are all being played and rendered by media as impotent fools. Although it may be the case that such was so in the past, and the present now is to deliver an altogether different future with 0day vulnerability exploitation of bankrupt SCADA Command and Control Systems providing the magic black markets and ammo for almighty novel weapons virtual machines of destruction which can easily be reconfigured to mass construction whenever superior intelligence is available and used rather than accepting any default status quo sub-prime offering to witness it being abused and misused, which is surely the most recent of situations, is it not?

Insanity: doing the same and crazy things over and over again and expecting different results is evident everywhere.

Good luck with that poisoned chalice of an desperate operation. Unfortunately for the Bank of England and the fiat capitalist system of mass population and mass product marketing command and control, has the abject failure of the Quantitative Easing Program exposed both real and virtual existential active persistent and active cyber threat platforms to whole new armies of state and non-state actors.

Far too little, much too late leaves stable doors ajar and horses bolted and major problems and crises in the works which cannot be undone or fixed in any usual or preferred manners. Completely new thinking requires a completely different set of new leaders for fixes which don't rely on old and ancient weaknesses and vulnerabilities which are easily exploited and that requires novel intelligence sources to be providing mainstream media and wannabe smarter establishment systems, richer enriched and enriching information for broadbandcasting/mass perceptions management.

And that is both extremely rare and therefore can be horrendously expensive but as cheap as chips compared to the cost of the damage that can be so easily anonymously done without it and its IT Command and Media Control Programs.

Re: Insanity, the Great Game, and how IT is Played to Win Win with Sad Mad and Bad Rad Losers

And there is here at least one EI Reg commentard a'wondering on whether that which is lurking unsung and unpraised and unappraised in UK.gov kicks long awaited digi strategy into long grass, blames EU referendum recognises the dire straits need for greater beta seed feed of IT Command and Media Control Programs for AAA state and non-state actors, in order not to be extraordinarily rendered on the public media controlled stage as just coincidental inconsequential collateral extras with bit players roles simple fluffers for bigger picture prime money shot action with climaxes.

For such is both the fate and destiny of that and those in both debt and intelligence deficit to Great Gamesplay.

Hi, Peak Finance,

The leading protagonists would do well to heed the following, which is well evidenced to be true and proven with many tests over time in countless different spaces and places

2. When you engage in actual fighting, if victory is long in coming, then men's weapons will grow dull and their ardor will be damped. If you lay siege to a town, you will exhaust your strength.

3. Again, if the campaign is protracted, the resources of the State will not be equal to the strain.

4. Now, when your weapons are dulled, your ardor damped, your strength exhausted and your treasure spent, other chieftains will spring up to take advantage of your extremity. Then no man, however wise, will be able to avert the consequences that must ensue.

5. Thus, though we have heard of stupid haste in war, cleverness has never been seen associated with long delays.

6. There is no instance of a country having benefited from prolonged warfare. Sun Tzu, The Art of War

And whatever are systems of explosive kinetic command and control going to do whenever confronted and fighting against invisible and intangible foe expertly versed in the virtual means and memes of attack and destruction and cyber defence. That takes very particular and peculiar smarts to effectively engage and defeat the enemy and/or competition and/or opposition and you can be assured that such be in catastrophically short supply within deemed corrupted and perverted unworthy systems.

Re: Insanity: doing the same and crazy thing over and over again @AC

Here is a prime sub-prime example of that current crazy insanity which is destroying both systems and markets, and both at warp speeds too, AC <http://www.zerohedge.com/news/2016-03-23/alice-wonderland-why-everything-nonsense>

And mainstream media's complicity in the non-investigative reporting of that sort of nonsense is another example of collective madness to consider as valid.

I don't think so, Casey E. That is a terrible guess, given the fact that Joe is presumed to be smarter than just average.
